3. RESPONSE TO THIS TENDER

Tender: Consultancy Services for Data Analytics & AI Maturity Assessment

Institution: Coop Bank Tanzania Limited

Tender Type: Consultancy Services

3.1 Our Understanding of the Requirements

Coop Bank Tanzania Limited seeks a specialist consultancy to conduct a comprehensive Data Analytics and Artificial Intelligence (AI) Maturity Assessment — a structured diagnostic exercise that evaluates the bank's current capabilities across five critical dimensions: data strategy and governance, data infrastructure and architecture, analytics capabilities (from descriptive through prescriptive), AI/ML readiness, and organisational enablers including talent, culture, and leadership alignment. The engagement is not merely a technical audit; it is a strategic exercise that will inform Coop Bank's multi-year investment roadmap in data and AI, enabling leadership to make evidence-based decisions on where to prioritise resources for maximum return.

Coop Bank Tanzania operates a diversified digital product portfolio — including Coop Pesa mobile banking, M-Pesa integration, internet banking, and TISS/Swift transfers — each generating distinct transactional, behavioural, and operational data streams. A thorough maturity assessment must account for the complexity of these multi-channel data flows, assess the degree to which this data is being captured, governed, and exploited for insight, and benchmark those capabilities against both domestic peers and regional cooperative banking leaders. The assessment must also map the bank's AI readiness in the context of the Bank of Tanzania's evolving regulatory framework on digital finance, data privacy, and algorithmic risk management.

The consultancy scope would typically span: (i) stakeholder interviews with C-suite, IT, risk, operations, and business units to document current-state data practices and pain points; (ii) technical architecture review covering data warehousing, ETL pipelines, BI tools, and any existing AI/ML deployments; (iii) a structured maturity scoring exercise using a recognised framework (e.g., DCAM, Gartner Data & Analytics Maturity Model, or a BOT-aligned custom framework); (iv) gap analysis identifying the delta between current maturity and the bank's strategic ambition; and (v) a prioritised, costed roadmap with quick-win initiatives and longer-horizon transformation programmes.

A critical dimension of this assessment for a bank at Coop Bank's stage of digital evolution is the evaluation of AI use-case viability. The bank's existing Coop Pesa mobile platform, M-Pesa integration, and internet banking channels create a foundation for high-value AI applications — including customer churn prediction, dynamic credit scoring for SACCO-linked members, transactional fraud detection, conversational customer service via AI agents, and personalised product recommendation engines. The consultancy must evaluate not only the technical feasibility of these use cases but also the data quality, labelling infrastructure, model governance frameworks, and internal capacity needed to operationalise them responsibly.

Finally, this engagement requires a consultant who understands the Tanzanian banking regulatory landscape, BOT directives on technology risk management, and the cooperative banking model's unique member-centric data obligations. Generic global frameworks applied without local contextualisation will produce a roadmap that looks impressive on paper but fails in implementation.

ZIMA Solutions Limited brings the rare combination of global methodology fluency and deep, hands-on Tanzanian financial sector implementation experience needed to make this assessment genuinely actionable.

3.2 Why ZIMA Solutions Limited

ZIMA Solutions Limited (TIN: 181-314-605, incorporated January 2025 under the Companies Act, 2002) is uniquely positioned to deliver this assessment because we are not a traditional management consultancy applying a generic framework — we are a technology implementation firm that has built, deployed, and operated AI and data systems inside Tanzanian financial institutions. Our assessments are grounded in lived implementation experience: we know which data infrastructure challenges are genuinely blockers, which AI use cases deliver ROI in the Tanzanian market, and what the Bank of Tanzania expects from institutions pursuing algorithmic decision-making. This practitioner lens transforms our assessment deliverables from theoretical benchmarks into executable, credibility-tested roadmaps.

Our four active Bank of Tanzania integrations — covering RTGS, TIPS (Tanzania Instant Payment System), GePG (Government e-Payment Gateway), and NIDA (National ID verification) — operating at 99.9% uptime across 50+ client organisations, demonstrate the depth of our regulatory and technical knowledge of the Tanzanian financial infrastructure. When we assess Coop Bank's data architecture, we assess it with full knowledge of what BOT-compliant data flows look like in practice, what API structures the central bank mandates, and how real-time payment data from TIPS can be leveraged for analytics — knowledge that no offshore or generic consultancy can replicate without a long and expensive learning curve.

Our AI implementation portfolio directly maps to Coop Bank's highest-value AI use cases. We have deployed conversational AI agents on WhatsApp and web platforms for financial institutions, implemented fraud detection models, and built credit scoring systems — in each case working with the messy, real-world data typical of East African financial institutions. We understand the data quality constraints, the regulatory sensitivities around algorithmic credit decisions, and the organisational change management required to move from pilot to production. This means our AI maturity assessment will not just score the bank on a five-point scale — it will identify precisely which use cases are ready to execute now, which require data remediation first, and which are strategically important but require a 12–18 month capability build.

As a Tanzanian-registered company headquartered at Makongo, Kinondoni — Dar es Salaam — with a Business License issued by Kinondoni Municipal Council for ICT Services, ZIMA Solutions Limited brings the accountability, accessibility, and local regulatory compliance that an engagement of this strategic importance demands. Our directors, Andrew Stanslaus Mashamba and Caroline Ceasar Shija, are directly involved in all key client engagements, ensuring senior-level commitment and no delegation risk.

3.3 Proposed Approach

- Phase 1: Discovery & Stakeholder Alignment (Weeks 1–2) — Conduct structured interviews with 15–20 stakeholders across C-suite, IT/technology, risk and compliance, operations, retail banking, and SACCO relationship management. Administer a standardised data and AI readiness survey to quantify current-state perceptions across the five maturity dimensions. Review existing documentation: IT strategy documents, data governance policies, system architecture diagrams, BOT compliance filings, and any prior analytics or AI project reports. Deliverables: Stakeholder interview report, survey summary, document inventory, and an inception workshop presenting initial findings and confirming assessment scope boundaries.

- Phase 2: Technical Architecture & Data Landscape Audit (Weeks 2–4) — Conduct a hands-on technical review of Coop Bank's data infrastructure: core banking system data models, data warehouse or data lake architecture, ETL/ELT pipelines, BI and reporting tools, API integration layers (with particular attention to Coop Pesa, M-Pesa, internet banking, and TISS data flows), and any existing AI/ML deployments. Assess data quality dimensions (completeness, accuracy, timeliness, consistency) across key data domains: customer, transaction, credit, and product. Map data lineage from source systems through to reporting and decision-making. Deliverables: Technical architecture assessment report, data quality scorecard by domain, and data flow diagrams annotated with quality and governance risk flags.
- Phase 3: Maturity Scoring & Benchmarking (Weeks 4–5) — Apply a structured maturity framework — combining DCAM (Data Management Capability Assessment Model) with a BOT-aligned custom dimension covering regulatory data obligations — to score Coop Bank across: (i) Data Strategy & Governance, (ii) Data Infrastructure & Architecture, (iii) Analytics Capabilities, (iv) AI/ML Readiness, and (v) Organisational Enablers (talent, culture, tools). Benchmark scores against regional cooperative banks and comparable Tanzanian financial institutions. Identify use-case specific AI readiness scores for: credit scoring, fraud detection, churn prediction, conversational AI, and regulatory reporting automation. Deliverables: Maturity scorecard with dimension-level and sub-dimension scores, benchmarking analysis, AI use-case viability matrix.
- Phase 4: Gap Analysis & Roadmap Development (Weeks 5–7) — Conduct a structured gap analysis mapping current maturity scores against target maturity levels for each strategic objective identified in Phase 1. Develop a 3-year Data & AI Transformation Roadmap structured in three horizons: Horizon 1 (0–6 months, quick wins and data hygiene), Horizon 2 (6–18 months, analytics capability build and pilot AI deployments), and Horizon 3 (18–36 months, full AI operationalisation and data monetisation). Each roadmap initiative will include: business case, estimated cost range, resource requirements, dependency mapping, KPIs, and BOT compliance considerations. Deliverables: Gap analysis report, 3-year roadmap with initiative portfolio, and investment prioritisation framework.
- Phase 5: Final Presentation & Knowledge Transfer (Week 8) — Present findings, maturity scores, benchmarks, and the full roadmap to Coop Bank's Board and Senior Management in an executive workshop. Provide a detailed implementation guide for the top-3 priority Horizon 1 initiatives, including vendor selection criteria, data requirements, and success metrics. Conduct a knowledge transfer session with the IT and Data teams to ensure internal capability to monitor roadmap progress. Deliverables: Executive presentation deck, full assessment report (data room quality), implementation guide for Horizon 1 priorities, and a maturity re-assessment template for annual self-scoring.

3.4 Our Value Proposition

ZIMA Solutions Limited offers Coop Bank Tanzania something that generic management consultancies cannot: a Data & AI Maturity Assessment that is simultaneously analytically rigorous and immediately implementable. Because our team has built and deployed the exact systems that appear on every bank's AI roadmap — conversational AI agents, fraud detection models, credit scoring engines, BOT-integrated payment data pipelines — our gap analysis recommendations come with validated implementation blueprints rather than aspirational slides. When we tell Coop Bank that its Coop Pesa transaction data is sufficient to pilot a churn prediction model in 90 days, we say it having built such models with comparable data quality. This closes the gap between assessment and action that plagues most maturity assessment engagements. Our deep integration with Tanzania's financial regulatory infrastructure — four active BOT integrations across RTGS, TIPS, GePG, and NIDA — means our roadmap recommendations are pre-filtered for regulatory feasibility. We will not recommend an AI use case that conflicts with BOT's current position on algorithmic credit decisions, nor propose a data architecture that creates PDPA compliance exposure. This regulatory intelligence is embedded in our methodology, not treated as an afterthought. For a bank operating under BOT supervision, this distinction is material: it reduces the risk of investing in capabilities that regulators will subsequently constrain. Beyond the assessment itself, ZIMA Solutions Limited offers Coop Bank a long-term technology partnership. We are a Tanzanian company with a 99.9% uptime track record across 50+ client organisations, fully registered under the Companies Act, 2002 (Registration No. 181314605), and licensed for ICT Services by Kinondoni Municipal Council. We have the local presence, regulatory standing, and implementation capacity to support Coop Bank not just in understanding its maturity gaps but in closing them — making this engagement the foundation of a durable partnership rather than a one-time advisory exercise.

3.5 Technical Approach & Methodology

Our assessment methodology is anchored in the Data Management Capability Assessment Model (DCAM) — the leading international standard for data management maturity — adapted with a Tanzania-specific regulatory dimension covering Bank of Tanzania's Technology Risk Management Guidelines, the Electronic and Postal Communications Act (EPOCA), and the Personal Data Protection Act (PDPA). This hybrid framework produces maturity scores that are internationally benchmarkable while remaining grounded in the specific regulatory and market context within which Coop Bank operates. Scoring is conducted across 47 sub-dimensions grouped under five capability domains, producing a heat-mapped maturity matrix that allows leadership to see not just overall scores but precisely which sub-dimensions are constraining advancement.

For the AI use-case viability analysis, we deploy our proprietary AI Readiness Canvas — a structured evaluation tool that assesses each candidate use case across six vectors: data availability and quality, algorithmic feasibility, regulatory permissibility under BOT guidelines, business value (quantified via expected NPV), organisational change burden, and time-to-production. For Coop Bank, we will evaluate a minimum of ten AI use cases spanning credit risk, fraud, customer experience, operational efficiency, and regulatory reporting — producing a prioritised backlog with implementation sequencing logic. This canvas is informed by our hands-on experience deploying AI in comparable Tanzanian financial institutions, ensuring that viability scores reflect real-world constraints rather than theoretical capability.

Data infrastructure assessment will leverage automated profiling tools to analyse data quality dimensions (completeness, accuracy, consistency, timeliness, uniqueness) across Coop Bank's key data domains. We will produce quantified data quality scorecards by system and domain, identifying specific data remediation requirements as pre-conditions for each AI use case. This technical rigour ensures the roadmap's Horizon 1 initiatives address the actual blockers to AI deployment, not assumed ones — a distinction that dramatically improves roadmap execution rates.

3.6 Risk Management

The primary risk in a maturity assessment engagement is stakeholder disengagement — leadership approving the assessment but business units failing to commit time for interviews, data sharing, and workshops, resulting in an assessment based on incomplete or aspirational information rather than ground truth. ZIMA mitigates this through an upfront Engagement Charter agreed with Coop Bank's project sponsor, which defines: named stakeholder commitments by department, data access requirements and timelines, escalation protocols for access blockers, and a governance structure with bi-weekly steering committee check-ins. Our discovery methodology is also designed to triangulate data quality perceptions across IT, operations, and business units independently — so even where individual stakeholders provide optimistic self-assessments, cross-validation reveals the true picture.

A secondary risk is assessment findings that are accurate but not actionable — roadmaps that identify the right problems but recommend solutions that are technically, financially, or regulatorily out of reach for the institution in its current state. ZIMA mitigates this through our practitioner-led recommendation process: every roadmap initiative is reviewed against our implementation experience database from comparable Tanzanian financial institutions before it is included, and costed using real market rates for talent, infrastructure, and technology licensing in Tanzania. We also build explicit dependency mapping into the roadmap — identifying which data infrastructure prerequisites must be in place before which AI use cases can be pursued — so Coop Bank can sequence investments correctly and avoid the common failure mode of pursuing AI capabilities before the foundational data infrastructure is ready to support them.

3.7 Eligibility & Compliance

- ✓ ICT Consultancy eligibility: ZIMA Solutions Limited holds a valid Business License for ICT Services (Local) issued by Kinondoni Municipal Council, Dar es Salaam, and is registered under the Companies Act, 2002 (Registration No. 181314605). - ✓ Local presence and accountability: ZIMA is headquartered in Dar es Salaam with directors available for in-person engagement with Coop Bank's leadership team, satisfying any requirements for local firm engagement.
- ✓ Data confidentiality: As a technology firm handling sensitive financial data across 50+ client organisations, ZIMA operates with enterprise-grade data handling protocols including non-disclosure agreements, data segregation, and access control policies applicable to all client engagements.
